Celebrating Chinary Ung’s 75th Year
Chinary Ung
b. 1942

Chinary Ung is often associated with that group of Asian-born composers whose music incorporates aspects of eastern musical characteristics into a western classical music setting. Aside from specific cultural and generational distinctions, the principal difference between Ung’s work and theirs is that for many years he was prevented from engaging directly with the source of his cultural heritage as his native country was being torn apart by the scourge of the Khmer Rouge. Indeed, as the people and culture of Cambodia were being systematically destroyed, Ung took it upon himself to rescue some facet of the traditional music he had known as a child, reconstituting Cambodian musical traditions through his performances on the roneat-ek – the Cambodian xylophone. This project reflects the qualities of responsibility and of hopefulness that are so strongly a part of Ung’s personality.

Ung’s Cambodian roots are woven into the fabric of his identity, but the musical aspects are, as a result of his peculiar circumstance, keenly related to memory. For many years – through the late 1980’s – Ung’s music had a plaintive character in its modally-inflected, melodic behaviors, as if he were reaching back to another time uncorrupted by political tumult. Ung’s work of this period established him as a major figure in American music, winning citations from virtually every major musical arts institution in his adopted country. For Inner Voices he was given the Grawemeyer Award, the first American recipient of this prestigious prize in music composition. That work, along with the Spirals series indicates a self-referential artistic project where one seeks spiritual strength and inspiration through meditation and quiet contemplation, traits of Buddhist spiritual exercises. The Spirals series in particular shows an affinity for the connection between pieces.

The creative impetus draws from many sources – such as dreams -- and there is a distinct pictorial and spiritual basis to Ung’s music. Aura, a large work for two sopranos and chamber ensemble written in 2005, refers to the multicolored aura surrounding the Buddha’s head. The work’s extensive amplification draws the listener into the performance space, as if invited into the healing light of the Buddha. Rain of Tears, a concerto for chamber orchestra composed in 2006, commemorates the victims of natural disasters in Bandeh Aceh and New Orleans. Its many variants on rising and falling figures present a staggering interpretation of wave imagery. In this work, Ung invokes the Buddhist concept of Shunyata, which he describes as spiritual openness, in order to inspire four distinct statements of compassion.

Ung’s extensive orchestral catalog has been commissioned and performed by major orchestras throughout the United States and abroad, including those in Philadelphia, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Tokyo, Sydney, Basel, as well as the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra, and the American Composers Orchestra. Boston Modern Orchestra Project released a recording of Ung’s orchestral music in 2015. Ung’s work has been commissioned by the Meet the Composer/Reader’s Digest Commissioning Program, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the Ford, Koussevitsky, Joyce, and Barlow Foundations. In 2014 he was given the John D. Rockefeller 3rd Award by the New York-based Asian Cultural Council.

Ung recently participated in the Pacific Rim Festival at University of California Santa Cruz, where his work entitled Singing Inside Aura III, for Amplified Singing Violist and Korean Traditional Orchestra, received performances at both UC Berkeley and UC Santa Cruz. This piece, commissioned by the Gugak Center, is projected to receive another performance in Seoul, Korea, December 2017. Additionally, the National Endowment of the Arts has extended support for the forthcoming Therigatha Inside Aura, dedicated to the peacemakers of tomorrow. This spring, Chapman University will present a Chinary Ung Portrait Concert at the new Musco Center for the Arts, and he begins his residence at Scripps College in March 2018, where Therigatha Inside Aura will be performed and recorded.

By any measure, Chinary Ung is an astonishingly prolific composer, yet his focus is rarely turned inward. Indeed, one notes in his activities as a cultural leader and educator a profound sense of responsibility to a broader cultural and societal context. In the years since the holocaust Ung has worked with numerous institutions and individuals who share his dedication toward preserving Cambodian culture and forging cultural exchanges between Asia and the West, such as The Asian Cultural Council. He was President of the Khmer Studies Institute in the U.S.A. between 1980-1985, and was an advisor for the Killing Fields Memorial and Cambodian Heritage Museum of Chicago and a member of the Cambodian-Thai cultural committee.

As an educator, Ung has taught courses in Southeast Asian music and he has instructed generations of young composers at several institutions in the United States, and now, through a series of residencies, in Asia as well. In this regard he follows the example of his mentor, Chou Wen-chung. He holds appointments at University of California, San Diego, where he is Distinguished Professor of Music, and at Chapman University, where he is a Presidential Fellow and Senior Composer in Residence. For the 2017-2018 academic year he is the Karel Husa Visiting Professor in Composition at Ithaca College. He and his wife Susan direct the Nirmita Composers Institute each summer, with the goal of providing compositional direction and opportunity to musicians from Southeast Asia.

His music is featured on recordings released on Bridge, CAMBRIA, CRI, New World, Argo, and oodiscs, among others. Chinary Ung’s compositions are published exclusively by C.F. Peters Corporation and they are registered under BMI.

Imagery and Symbolism in Chinary Ung’s Aura (2005)

Aura (2005) has a special place in Ung’s repertoire as he considers the piece to be his “teacher.” Central to the work is the idea of radiating light that associated with the Buddha’s enlightened state, known in the Khmer language as chaw pean raingsei. My analysis aims to illustrate how the sonic journey through Aura is comparable to passing through the five elements to get to the inner sanctuary of Neak Pean, an ancient Cambodian stone monument originally designed for healing, and how Ung’s music integrates nature imagery, symbolism, and ritual to convey aspects of earthly suffering and worship of the divine. I will conclude by addressing broader issues of interculturalism and globalization in thinking about Ung’s music and its place in the arena of contemporary music today.

Chinary Ung’s “Singing Inside Aura” Project: Variation, Recontextualization, and Recomposition in Three Recent Scores

In the Fall of 2012 Chinary Ung began work on “Singing Inside Aura,” a piece for “singing violist” and chamber orchestra. Dedicated to his wife, Susan, who would be tasked with the challenging soloist’s role, the project was the first orchestral foray in a series of works dating back to 1997 that incorporated a significant amount of vocalization – singing, chanting, whistling – into the instrumentalist’s part. Rather than marking a single point along a straight line of compositions, “Singing Inside Aura” would become a central core around which new possibilities might radiate. Just months after its premiere, Ung wrote a version for a chamber ensemble of 7 performers along with the singing violist. Not content to simply downscale the original orchestral materials, Ung’s work in the chamber version contained a substantial amount of recomposition, even while the soloist’s material is virtually unchanged. Ung has subsequently written a version of the piece for Korean orchestra, and there are plans for a future piece for percussion quartet. The project has now dominated Ung’s creative output for five years, and therefore deserves special attention as it demonstrates, perhaps paradoxically, how flexible Ung’s compositional approach can be while also being relentlessly self-referential.

Koji Nakano
Tracing Cultural Legacies and Traditional Sensibilities in the “Futuristic Folk Music” of Chinary Ung

The process of navigating deeply held cultural values when composing a new piece can be transformative. Over the past several decades, Cambodian-American Composer Chinary Ung has composed a diverse array of cross-cultural works, and he continues to expand and deepen his international role as a leading Asian composer and educator. In this paper, I discuss Ung’s approach to composing, which enables him to be inspired by Cambodian traditional music and culture while continuing to practice Western composition. I also examine what Ung calls his “futuristic folk music”—new sounds sourced in the architecture, philosophy, and traditional music of Cambodia. In closing, I will discuss how the concept of “futuristic folk music” can be deployed to encourage composers and musicians of any culture to engage actively in a creative process that incorporates their living traditions, cultures, and art forms.
ABOUT THE GUEST SPEAKERS

YAYOI EVERETT is currently Professor of Music at University of Illinois at Chicago. Her research focuses on the analysis of postwar art music, film, and opera from the perspectives of semiotics, literary criticism, multimedia theories, and cultural studies. Her publications include monographs Reconfiguring Myth and Narrative in Contemporary Operas (2015), The Music of Louis Andriessen (2006), and a co-edited volume Locating East Asia in Western Music (2004). She has also published analyses of music by Kaija Saariaho, Elliott Carter, György Ligeti, Chou Wen-chung, Toru Takemitsu, Toshio Hosokawa, Toshi Ichiyanagi, and Lei Liang. She has received grants from the Japan Foundation, Society for Music Theory, Boligasco Foundation, and National Endowment for the Humanities. She has served as Associate Editor of Music Theory Spectrum and as President of Music Theory Southeast.

Award-winning composer KOJI NAKANO’s compositions reflect the relationship between beauty, form, and imperfection through the formality of music. He is recognized as one of the major voices among Asian composers of his generation.

Dr. Nakano obtained his Bachelor’s Degree and Master’s Degree in composition from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. From 2002 to 2003, he studied with Dutch composer Louis Andriessen in Amsterdam and at the Royal Conservatory of The Hague as the Japanese Government Overseas Study Program Artist. In 2006, he received his Ph.D. in composition from the University of California San Diego.

In 2008, Dr. Nakano became the first composer to receive the S&R Washington Award Grand Prize. His portrait concert has been presented at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and at Tenri Cultural Institute of New York, among other venues. In the winter quarter of 2013, Dr. Nakano was a visiting faculty member at the University of California at Santa Cruz, where he taught world music composition. He has also been a guest professor in composition at Taipei National University of the Arts, National Taiwan University of Arts, and Seoul National University. In 2016, he was named the Scripps Erma Taylor O’Brien Distinguished Visiting Professor at Scripps College in the U.S.

Co-founder of the Asian Young Musicians’ Connection (AYMC), Dr. Nakano commissions emerging composers to create music that is performed by worldwide professional musicians at AYMC’s annual concerts, lectures, and workshops. Currently, he is the Head of International Affairs for the Faculty of Music and Performing Arts at Burapha University in Thailand, where he teaches composition as a full-time faculty member. At Burapha, he is also Director of International Programs for the Annual Music and Performing Arts International Festival and directs the Experimental Thai Music Laboratory for Young Composers.
Adam Greene’s compositions have been commissioned and presented by performers and institutions committed to the promotion of new and innovative musical experiences, including SONOR, Ensemble Resonanz, the Formalist Quartet, and Speculum Musicae. His collaborations with adventurous and generous soloists have been vital in forging an approach towards the musical score that places sometimes extreme physical and technical demands in a meaningful dramatic and expressive context.

Born in Chicago in 1970, Adam Greene took degrees in Music and Anthropology at Connecticut College, and earned a Master's in Composition at the New England Conservatory of Music. After studies in Italy with Franco Donatoni he moved to California, where, at UC San Diego, he received the Ph.D. Greene’s principal mentor in composition was Roger Reynolds. He took additional studies with Brian Ferneyhough and Arthur Berger, and he had important encounters with Ligeti, Carter, Martino, Babbitt, and Davidovsky.

Adam Greene’s music has been performed throughout the United States as well as in Europe and Asia. He has participated in several festivals and residency programs that have featured his works, such as UCROSS, the Atlantic Center for the Arts, the International Ferienkurse für Neue Musik (Darmstadt), the Composers Conference at Wellesley, the Summer Institute for Contemporary Piano Performance (at the New England Conservatory of Music), and the Long Beach Summer Arts program. His awards include a commission grant from the Fromm Music Foundation at Harvard, as well as prizes from ASCAP, American Composers Forum, American Composers Orchestra (EarShot), and NACUSA. Recordings of his music can be found on Aucourant Records.

Program Notes

Still Life After Death

Still Life After Death (1995) is a music theatre work inspired by an ancient Cambodian ritual that traditionally takes place at an individual’s deathbed. A Buddhist monk would be invited to a home to preside at this ritual, which assists a dying person in his or her transit from life to death. The monk chants short phrases in the ancient language of Pali, and the dying person would repeat each phrase after the monk, until the very last breath. In Still Life..., the female vocalist represents the dying person and the male vocalist represents the Buddhist monk.

—Susan Ung

One of the main concepts of the staging was to develop a neutral awareness in the gestures and movement of performers, allowing them to move beyond the recognizable and familiar associations. As the lead character—the living—embarks on a ritualistic, spiritual journey towards the end of life, the search to obtain insight into the great beyond eventually points to the dissolution of self. A fully realized and awakened state sheds physical attachments and maps a way out through the process of acceptance. Matter, mind, perception and consciousness are encouraged by the Monk, the ever-present, undetectable companion. Both roles, essentially representing Life and Death, move in and out of the shadows to change places, always keeping the balance.

—Timur Bekbosunov

Cinnabar Heart for solo marimba/voice

The color cinnabar (also known as vermilion and China red) has some interesting connotations. In China it is the color of long life. In the Buddhist tradition it is associated with compassion. The title Cinnabar Heart, then, is intended as an expressive frame for the piece; however I hope to invite considerable interpretive flexibility on the part of the performer. In Southeast Asia a performer and composer are one in the same.

Cinnabar Heart is brief piece of music that asks the performer to sing on syllables mostly drawn from Pali, which is a sacred, unspoken language. I am drawn to these syllables primarily for their sounds as opposed to their meaning, so it would be beside the point to mention many details regarding a text.

The piece is designed as a single line extending in a continuous, flowing manner. Its progression is highly flexible, and the performer is often asked to use her discretion with regard to musical time. The expansion and contraction of time should be palpable as rhythmic patterns are revealed and concealed.

Cinnabar Heart was commissioned by Zeltsman Marimba Festival, Inc., through the special project ZMF New Music. Beverly Johnston premiered the work June 30, 2009 at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wisconsin, and recorded the piece for a double-CD, Intermediate Masterworks for Marimba (Bridge Records). The printed music appears in Volume 2 of Intermediate Masterworks for Marimba, a 2-volume collection of 24 concert pieces published by C.F. Peters Corporation.

Letters From Home

The genocide committed by the Khmer Rouge regime was one of the worst mass killings in the 20th century. Up to two million Cambodian people were killed: roughly twenty percent of the country’s population.
About a year ago, my father revealed to me that he had a box of letters written to him from refugee camps by the surviving members of our family, those who had lived through the genocide. My father had not opened this box for almost 40 years, as the memories of this time were painful. Together, we sorted through them and he translated them. I wove these letters into a play to pay tribute to our family members, and it is also about my own journey of being a first-generation American and the daughter of an immigrant.

In writing this piece it was clear to me that I was exploring how cultural trauma is passed down generation to generation. Whose responsibility is it to tell these stories? What is the remedy for the wounds inflicted by our history?

I was working through how to tell the stories of the previous generation, who are only now beginning to find the ability to talk about what happened. There are challenges in writing and performing lived experiences of real people, people that I know and love. This maneuvering was delicate but the momentum surrounding the stories seemed urgent to me; my father is turning 75 this month and I am heartbroken to see many of our current political leaders’ views in regards to immigrants, refugees, and people fleeing their countries because their homeland has been destroyed.

When I was writing Letters From Home, my dad kept saying, “you have the words. I do not.” He would then make a joke, “I’m just a composer, but you are the actor. You know how to work with words.” My father’s work as a composer, especially in recent years, often requires the musicians to sing and sometimes for the trained singers to play an instrument. The text my father uses in his music is not in a particular language. It is a mixture of made-up phonemes, and various words and sounds. Although my father is a very goofy and silly man, his music is deep, intense, and complicated to perform. My sister and I would argue that this may be the only outlet for his trauma. Perhaps there are no words to encompass what he is trying to write. I like to imagine that through the collaboration between his music, these letters, and my words, a space for healing is made.

I chose to write this piece in vignettes that shift around in time. This river of consciousness reflects the manner in which I processed the letters. In many ways, the letters were the missing piece in finally understanding a family member or an experience.

More importantly, it opened up a portal for me to have many deeper conversations with my father. The collaboration and experience of this was invaluable to our relationship. I also became interested in my own experiences in performing female, Shakespearian archetypes as an actor. Many of the roles I have played echo universal stories of pain, suffering, and loss. It became clear to me that these archetypes of wife, mother, daughter were also ways for me to connect to my family’s history.

The work you are about to see is still a work in progress. Perhaps in some ways, it always will be. I perform it with the sincere intention to connect with you, the audience, within this personal story.

My father and I hope that you enjoy Letters From Home and we thank you for coming.

—Kalean Ung

Singing Inside Aura

The use of singing, chanting, and other vocal behaviors while playing an instrument is the most important development of Chinary Ung’s music during the past decade. A high point in this practice was reached with Spiral XI: Mother and Child (2007), for viola, a work written for Susan Ung. Over the course of the past several years, Mrs. Ung has made the work her own, effectively codifying a performance practice around her immersion in the peculiar demands introduced in that particular piece. As she puts it, one must be of two minds at once when singing and playing simultaneously.

The inherent complexity of this engagement is an enormous task for the performer, and the collaboration between the Ungs has formed a vital and vibrant approach, achieving a level of performance that transcends the binary condition of singing and/or playing to form a separate, distinct dimension that is at once elemental and spiritual. By ‘elemental’ one refers to the body: this is a physical test requiring the instrumentalist to coordinate playing with the voice, which requires a level of breath control that cannot be achieved through standard practice instrumental training. Though the issue of power is mitigated somewhat by the use of amplification for the voice, the problem of breath control is still a weighty challenge. The spiritual dimension that emerges lies partly in the achievement of this physical challenge, and partly in the character of the material itself, which is often chant-like and oracular.

The text that is spoken, sung, and chanted by the soloist and ensemble is drawn mostly from Khmer and Pali. For the most part, these words and syllables are chosen for their sonic character as opposed to their meaning. There are exceptions, however, such as in the Coda. There, Pali words are used in a chant-like passage. These words include \textit{Akasa} (space), \textit{Monomaya} (the power of spiritual creation), and \textit{Nana Vpphara} (the power of penetrating knowledge).

Ung completed \textit{Singing Inside Aura}, for amplified singing violist and chamber orchestra, in early 2013. It was dedicated to his wife, Susan, who premiered the work with BMOP in Boston in February 2013. The chamber ensemble version of the piece that we will hear this evening is no mere arrangement; it is a thorough re-composition that invests a substantial degree of energy in the septet of instruments that accompanies the viola solo. Indeed, the level of complexity of these parts is equivalent to that of the solo part itself.

\textit{Spiral XIV “Nimitta”}

Chinary Ung wrote \textit{Spiral} – a piece for piano, ‘cello, and percussion -- more than twenty-five years ago, finding fertile territory in the metaphor of something winding continuously around a fixed point. This concept yielded two important ideas for a musical work: orientation and recursion, and it was somehow fitting that a series of \textit{Spiral} pieces emerged. In each \textit{Spiral} piece there tends to be a central, recurrent idea that is re-imagined over the course of the work and the spiral idea itself is re-imagined in each new instantiation. After eight pieces for a variety of instrumental forces composed over a period of ten years, Ung was satisfied that the idea was exhausted and he left the series on hiatus for nearly a decade. But how can one complete something that is continuous? As if to prove the persistence of the guiding metaphor, Ung returned to the series in 2007, but this time he joined the \textit{Spirals} idea with a more recent innovation in which performers produce vocal sounds and play their instruments simultaneously. Given the often-extravagant nature of Ung’s instrumental writing, this intensification of responsibilities is a demanding enterprise for the performer.

Other composers – notably, Crumb and Takemitsu – have asked performers to use their voices, but not to the same degree of variety and complexity as has Ung. Difficulty and virtuosity aside, Ung’s musical approach stands alone for its attempt, as Ung puts it, to “bring the village to the concert hall.” Folk music traditions worldwide combine singing and playing, so the use of vocalization in Ung’s music is a return to this framework, even as he makes full use of the instrumental expertise afforded to performers who have specialized in their instruments through years of practice.

It is a hallmark of Ung’s music to refer to Southeast Asian traditions insofar as the sound world often contains similar figurative gestures (like microtonal bends) and modal scales. \textit{Spiral XIV} inevitably invokes ensemble traditions such as the Khmer Pinpeat and Balinese Gamelan through its use of mallet instruments and bells in the two percussion parts. In some ways, these are the surface aspects that align this music with Ung’s native Cambodia, but the deep structure lies in the spiritual association of the voice. As musicians perform their instruments and vocalize they engage in two simultaneous threads of inquiry associated with a single character, each of equal weight and importance. The challenge of inhabiting these multiple simultaneous dimensions is akin to a transcendental spiritual exercise. In Pali the word Nimitta means a sign or image received through meditation. This image could be of the future or the past, or it may be a manifestation of ultimate consciousness. Nimitta is the result of a practice, or discipline, not unlike that which is required to perform the music.

I will leave the reader with one final image to contemplate. Roughly two thirds of the way into Spiral XIV there is a duo for the two percussionists, who play non-pitched instruments along with vocalizations. In the score appears the phrase “Intertwining Dragons,” which is a reference to the ancient Cambodian site Neak Pean in which a small temple sits atop a small island in the middle of a large pool of water. The site is believed to have been a sort of hospital, and a soak in the surrounding waters would restore one’s health. The base of the temple is surrounded by sculptures of intertwining serpents. Snakes and dragons have special status in Khmer mythology. They are excellent protectors, they cannot be tamed, and their ability to molt is a sign of constant renewal. Thus, the percussionists are transformed into fierce protectors – immortal avatars of healing.

Spiral XII “Space Between Heaven and Earth”

Although most of Chinary Ung’s compositions are instrumental music (with the caveat that the recent work usually includes vocalization along with instrumental parts) he has occasionally dabbled in the theatrical. His Still Life After Death was initially an un-staged duodrama that feels epic despite its short duration. More recently, Aura was a sort of oratorio, in which two sopranos engage in a mystic journey among a dynamic, vocalizing chamber orchestra. With Spiral XII: “Space Between Heaven and Earth” (2008) Ung ventured into the domain of the spectacle, in which a mixed chorus of 40 singers played alongside a vocalizing chamber orchestra that was particularly rich with Asian percussion instruments while Cambodian dancers performed new work choreographed by Sophiline Cheam Shapiro.

This current arrangement eliminates the dance component and reduces both the instrumental ensemble and the chorus, which is now re-conceived as a group of 13 soloists. Through these leaner resources, Ung takes a focused approach through the same material, in a work of more than 40 minutes. The piece addresses, as he puts it, “the richness of the culture of Cambodia” in two sections. Part I: “Song Offerings” is intended to be music for the spirits. This sets the stage for the much longer Part II: “Space Between Heaven and Earth,” which invokes the Buddhist principle of emptiness in order to relieve suffering, particularly that of the Cambodian people.

The “space” that Ung invokes in Part II is often registral; the lowest notes in the string ensemble are sustained while fluttering, spiraling figures abound in the high woodwinds. Whereas the shunyata or “bubble” of Buddhist teaching would only require that empty space be formed between these boundaries, it is in Ung’s nature to fill it – to think about who might benefit from its peaceful presence. In this case, the Bass singers have a prominent part, thereby rooting this space towards the ground, to the human realm, where all the suffering takes place and yet where compassion is also found.

Chinary would like to extend his sincere thanks to the following:

Adam Greene for his contributions to this project above and beyond the Symposium, guest speakers and scholars Yayoi Uno Everett, Koji Nakano, and all of the Faculty from the Department of Music who have lent their knowledge and expertise to these performances. Thank you to all of the bright and talented students who have participated and truly collaborated with me in order to make Chinary 75 a reality, with special emphasis to Lydia Winsor Brindamour as project manager, Xavier Beteta, and Felipe Rossi for being a part of “Team Chinary” and ensuring that everything went as smoothly as possible during the last several months of coordination on this. Thank you to all of the guest artists, who have traveled to San Diego to perform in these concerts, for their commitment to realizing my works at the highest level.

Thank you to Jacob Sudol for assisting with the recording of Spiral XII as well as to Bridge Records for releasing the album. A special thank you to the inimitable Gil Rose without whom the performance and recording of Spiral XII would not be possible.

Thank you my wife Susan Ung for her endless support over the years, and participation in this project, as well as my daughter Kalean and all of her wonderful work, and most importantly the heart and passion that went into creating Letters From Home. I would also like to thank the Staff of the Department of Music for their work, and the tireless Production crew who made this festival a reality. A special thanks to the Concert Committee, Wednesdays@7, the Composition and Integrative Studies areas and the Dean’s Office which provided the funding for this performance and to the Academic Senate for their support of the recording.
About the Performers

TIMUR BEKBOSUNOV

“the extravagantly transgressive tenor, dangerously seductive” (LA Times), has made solo appearances with LA Philharmonic, Bang on a Can All-Stars, Sarasota Opera, PROTOTYPE Festival, Utah Opera, Long Beach Opera, Santa Cecilia Academy, Budapest Palace of the Arts and the Industry LA, among others. He has collaborated with many composers, including Thomas Adès, Evan Ziporyn, David Lang, Silvano Bussotti, David T. Little, Mohammed Fairouz, Anne LeBaron, the late Gian-Carlo Menotti, Peter Eötvös, Veronika Krausas, Charles Bernstein, Erling Wold, Tobias Picker and Nick Urrata. His band Timur and the Dime Museum, described by NPR’s Here & Now as “post-punk screaming opera”, has appeared on America’s Got Talent, opened for Tiger Lilies, DeVotchKa, and collaborated with the Klaus Nomi songwriter, Kristian Hoffman. The band appeared as part of PROTOTYPE in 2013, and in 2014, premiered and toured an environmental rock-opera COLLAPSE by Daniel Corral at Redcat Theater, Miami Light Project and Operadagen Rotterdam. Produced by Beth Morrison Projects, COLLAPSE received its NY debut as part of BAM 2015 Next Wave Festival. TIMUR is a co-creator of “Silent Steppe Cantata” by Anne LeBaron, a large-scale composition about Kazakhstan. His voice is featured on the Hollywood soundtrack of “Ruby Sparks” and on recordings by Naxos USA, Milan Records, Nonesuch, Deutsche Grammophon and ANTI-. He is currently developing “Love, Honor, Obey,” a new project in collaboration with comedian Margaret Cho; and “Nueva Cancion: Songs of Protest,” a recipient of NPN grant. In 2019, his band will premiere “Artaud in the Black Lodge” by David T. Little. He is a faculty member of the California Institute of the Arts and a creative director of Ace Pictures Entertainment, a Malaysia-based film investment company.

KYLE ADAM BLAIR

is an active pianist, vocal coach, and music director in the San Diego area, specializing in the performance of American contemporary music. His focuses include the performance of new works in collaboration with composers and the performance of works from the middle-to late 20th century. As a soloist, Blair is set to release his first solo album soon, entitled Palm Sunday. The album consists of five solo piano works by noted American composer Stuart Saunders Smith; one of which, the title track Palm Sunday, was commissioned by Blair in 2012. Blair also recently premiered and recorded all twelve of Bruno Ruviaro’s Pós-Tudos, a set of piano etudes combining musical and technical challenges with extensive musical borrowing which are available for download on BandCamp. As a collaborator, Blair released a free-jazz improvisation album in 2013 with percussionist Krzysztof Golinski under the duo name Minderbinder, entitled “No One is Trying To Kill You, Sweetheart.” His other collaborations have included two concerts with Bang-On- A-Can All-Stars, numerous appearances with the La Jolla Symphony under the direction of Stephen Schick, and premieres of numerous solo and chamber works of California composers. In addition to concertized musical performances, Blair actively pursues opportunities to collaborate in theatrical realms. He has been involved in music direction and preparation with kallisti productions of The Threepenny Opera and the premiere of Stephen Lewis’s opera Noon at Dusk, as well as music direction and composition for UCSD Theatre & Dance performances of The Cherry Orchard, Movers and Shakers, Anansi, and Though It May Shift as well as Casagemas and Borealis for the Wagner New Play Festival. Blair is currently a candidate for the Doctor of Musical Arts degree in Contemporary Music Performance at UC San Diego under the mentorship of Aleck Karis.

A dedicated purveyor of modern music, TYLER J. BORDEN has performed with contemporary luminaries such as the JACK Quartet, Tony Conrad, Steve McCaffery, and Ensemble Offspring (Australia). He has performed at Alvin Lucier’s 85th Birthday Festival (Switzerland), Musikprotokoll (Austria), June in Buffalo, Darmstadt Ferienkurse für Neue Musik, VIPA Festival (Valencia, Spain), Queens New Music Festival (NYC), and the MATA Inteval Series (NYC). Tyler has worked with established composers such as Brian Ferneyhough, Catherine Lamb, Josh Levine, Alvin Lucier, Steve Takasugi, and La Monte Young, but he is particularly interested in the music of his generation and has worked extensively with young composers such as Paul Hembree, Ben Isaacs, Hunjoo Jung, Jenna Lyle, and Rob Phillips. Currently, he is core member of [Switch~ Ensemble], which focuses on the performance of electroacoustic works and has worked closely with many composers, including Philippe Leroux, James Bean, and Timothy McCormack. As a creative force, Tyler regularly collaborates in various capacities, most of which are improvisational in nature. He has performed in that capacity throughout North America and Europe and his improvisations were included in Guggenheim Fellow Kasumi’s film Shockwaves. Tyler J. Borden grew up in Rochester, NY and studied at Ithaca College and SUNY Buffalo, where his primary cello teachers were Elizabeth Simkin and Jonathan Golove, respectively. He is currently pursuing his DMA at UC San Diego with Charles Curtis.

REID BRUTON’s low bass voice can be heard on the soundtracks of over 100 major motion pictures including Star Wars, Frozen, Avatar, Minions, Planet of the Apes and the Boston Pops Christmas CD singing “You’re a Mean One Mr. Grinch”. Kawamura is now pursuing her DMA degree under Aleck Karis at the University of California San Diego.

Tenor Jon Lee Keenan is a native of Las Vegas, Nevada. Influenced at a young age by his father, a classically trained woodwind player and jazz saxophonist, Jon cultivated a taste for a variety of musical styles. While a high school student at the Las Vegas Academy for Performing Arts, Jon found himself winning state solo vocal competitions, writing music and playing guitar with his 8-piece all original ska band, and singing first tenor in the local collegiate vocal ensemble. After earning a triple degree in music at UNLV in Las Vegas, Jon moved out to Southern California to pursue a career in classical singing, studying Vocal Arts at the USC Thornton School of Music. Jon was first introduced to the Los Angeles classical music scene by the Los Angeles Master Chorale with whom he has been featured as a soloist in each season since joining on with the group in 2007. Recent highlights with LAMC include the role of “Evangelist” in Bach’s St. Matthew Passion, tenor soloist in Handel’s Messiah, and the narrator in Hugo Distler’s The Story of Christmas. Currently, Jon is in demand on opera stages and concert halls throughout California and the United States. Recent appearances with Southwest Chamber Music include collaborations on Britten’s A Birthday Hansel for tenor and harp, and A Sunbeam’s Architecture, an orchestral song cycle by poet E.E. Cummings and composer Elliot Carter at Red Cat. Recent opera roles with the Pacific Opera Project include “Don Ottavio” in Don Giovanni and “Tanzmeister” in Ariadne auf Naxos. Over the past few seasons, Jon has helped create several new exciting characters through collaborations with The Industry LA including “Clyde Barrow” in Bonnie and Clyde (Andrew McIntosh) and “Little Monk” in Brecht’s Galileo (Andy Akiho). This past June, Jon performed and recorded the role “Gniphos” in the LA Philharmonic’s co-production of Lou Harrison’s Young Caesar with The Industry LA. This season’s highlights include appearances with the Los Angeles Master Chorale in Handel’s Israel in Egypt; Orange County’s Pacific Chorale as the role of “Evangelist” in Bach’s St. John Passion; tenor soloist in Mozart’s rarely heard “Little Masonic” cantata Laut Verkünde unsre Freude conducted by Gustavo Dudamel; and the role of “Gunner” in the premiere of Orson Welles classic War of the Worlds turned opera by Yuval Sharon, Anne Gosfield and the LA Philharmonic.

Gil Rose is a conductor helping to shape the future of classical music. His dynamic performances and many recordings have garnered international critical praise. In 1996, Mr. Rose founded the Boston Modern Orchestra Project (BMOP), the foremost professional orchestra dedicated exclusively to performing and recording symphonic music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Under his leadership, BMOP’s unique programming and high performance standards have attracted critical acclaim and earned the orchestra fifteen ASCAP awards for adventurous programming as well as the John S. Edwards Award for Strongest Commitment to New American Music. Mr. Rose maintains a busy schedule as a guest conductor on both the opera and symphonic platforms. He made his Tanglewood debut in 2002 and in 2003 debuted with the Netherlands Radio Symphony at the Holland Festival. He has led the American Composers Orchestra, Warsaw Philharmonic, National Symphony Orchestra of the Ukraine, Cleveland Chamber Symphony, Orchestra della Svizzera Italiana, and the National Orchestra of Porto. In 2015, he made his Japanese debut substituting for Seiji Ozawa at the Matsumoto Festival conducting Berlioz’s Béatrice et Bénédict, and in March 2016 made his debut with New York City Opera at the Appel Room at Jazz at Lincoln Center. Over the past decade, Mr. Rose has also built a reputation as one of the country’s most inventive and versatile opera conductors. He founded Odyssey Opera, an inventive company dedicated to presenting eclectic operatic repertoire in a variety of formats, in September 2013. Prior to Odyssey Opera, Mr. Rose led Opera Boston as its Music Director starting in 2003, and in 2010 was appointed the company’s first Artistic Director. He led Opera Boston in several premieres including the world premiere of Zhou Long’s Madame White Snake, which won the Pulitzer Prize for Music in 2011. With Opera Unlimited, a contemporary opera festival associated with Opera Boston, he led the world premiere of Elena Ruehr’s Toussaint Before the Spirits, the New England premiere of Thomas Adès’s Powder Her Face, as well as the revival of John Harbison’s Full Moon in March and the North American premiere of Peter Eötvös’s Angels in America. Mr. Rose and BMOP recently partnered with the American Repertory Theater, Chicago Opera Theater, and the MIT Media Lab to create the world premiere of composer Tod Machover’s Death and the Powers (a runner-up for the 2012 Pulitzer Prize in Music). He conducted this seminal multimedia work at its world premiere at the Opéra Garnier in Monte Carlo, Monaco, in September 2010. An active recording artist, Gil Rose serves as the executive producer of the BMOP/sound recording label. His extensive discography includes world premiere recordings of music by John Cage, Lukas Foss, Charles Fussell, Michael Gandolfi, Tod Machover, Steven Mackey, Evan Ziporyn, and many others on such labels as Albany, Arsis, Chandos, ECM, Naxos, New World, and BMOP/sound. Mr. Rose has led the longstanding Monadnock Music Festival in historic Peterborough, NH, since his appointment as Artistic Director in 2012, conducting several premieres and making his opera stage directing debut in two revivals of operas by Dominick Argento, as well as conducting, directing and producing the world premier recording of Ned Rorem’s opera Our Town.

Susan Ung began studying violin late in her teens, and her first viola teacher was Nobuko Imai at Northern Illinois University, beginning in the mid-1970’s. Many fine string players from all over the world came to NIU to study with members of the Vermeer String Quartet. While there, she was also a member of NIU’s Chinese Orchestra and Balinese Gamelan, and participated in an active improvisation group that utilized other performers who were part of the Ethnomusicology music program there. She met Chinary Ung there in 1978, who was in his first teaching position and hired for a one-year appointment. They collaborated on the development of materials for Chinary’s KHSE BUON (1980), a solo work for cello commissioned by Marc Johnson, the cellist in the Vermeer Quartet. Susan was responsible largely for the opening of the work, as it was based on an improvisation inspired by music for the Indian saranghi, a five-stringed bowed instrument in the viola range. Susan did graduate studies in viola performance at Stony Brook University in New York under John Graham, where there were opportunities to work with many fine artists from the New York City area, and where she learned that she wanted to focus on contemporary solo and chamber music. Later, she helped to manage a contemporary ensemble comprised of performers from the Phoenix Symphony and faculty members at Arizona State University, Ensemble 21, which made several recordings in Phoenix. After moving to California she worked with Harvey Sollberger as a manager and principal violist of the La Jolla Symphony.

Violinist Shalini Vijayan, deemed “a vibrant violinist” by Mark Swed of the Los Angeles Times is an established performer and collaborator on both coasts. Always an advocate for modern music, Shalini was a founding member and Principal Second Violin of Kristjan Jarvi’s Absolute Ensemble, having recorded several albums with them including 2001 Grammy nominee, Absolution. As a part of Absolute, she has performed throughout the United States and Europe, most notably in London’s Barbican Hall and the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam. A member of the New World Symphony in Miami Beach, Florida from 1998-2001, Shalini served as concertmaster for Michael Tilson Thomas, John Adams, Reinbert de Leeuw and Oliver Knussen. She was also concertmaster for the world premiere performances and recording of Steven Mackey’s Tuck and Roll for RCA records in 2000. In Los Angeles, Shalini is featured regularly with Grammy Award winning Southwest Chamber Music and can be heard on their Grammy nominated Complete Chamber Works of Carlos Chávez, Vol. 3. Most recently, she has been a featured soloist with the Los Angeles Master Chorale in Chinary Ung’s Spiral XII and Tan Dun’s Water Passion. Shalini is also a founding member of the Lyris Quartet, and can be heard on their recent album, Intimate Letters. As a member of Lyris, she helped found the Hear Now Music Festival in Los Angeles. Shalini is on the performance faculty of the Nirmita Composers Workshop in Siem Reap, Cambodia.

Brian Walsh is a Los Angeles based clarinetist who is interested in sound and communication, regardless of genre. The LA times described Walsh’s playing as having “found the essence of a licorice stick’s lyrical limberness, often murmuring and wailing at the same time”. Mr. Walsh frequently performs with such diverse groups as Wild up Modern Music Collective, gnarwhallaby, Brightwork New Music, The New Century Players, and The California E.A.R. Unit. He also leads Walsh Set Trio, a jazz ensemble focusing on the performance of his own compositions. Performances have taken Walsh to Japan, Canada, Italy, England, the Netherlands, Iceland, and all over the United States. As a member of the contemporary music ensemble gnarwhallaby, Mr. Walsh gave the premier of Nicholas Deyoe’s Lullaby 4 at Carnegie Hall. Their Carnegie Hall performance was described as “startlingly versatile” by the New York Times. Mr.Walsh has also been a guest performer as a part of the Los Angeles Philharmonic’s Green Umbrella series at Walt Disney Concert Hall, and Monday Evening Concerts. Walsh has premiered pieces by Luigi Nono, Anne LeBaron, Girard Grisey, James Newton, Andrew Nathaniel McIntosh, Tom Johnson and many others. Past collaborators have included Peter Maxwell Davies, Meredith Monk, Gavin Bryars, Bobby Bradford, Nels Cline, Bright Eyes, San Fermin, Father John Misty, James Newton, and Muhal Richard Abrams.

Shannon Wettstein Sadler, pianist, has championed all that is new and adventurous in classical music as soloist and chamber musician. Shannon is the pianist in the acclaimed flute and piano duo, Calliope, with flutist Elizabeth McNutt and was formerly pianist with the contemporary music ensemble Zeitgeist, based in St. Paul and Boston’s Auros Group for New Music. Dr. Sadler has premiered countless new works, typically over 60 new works a year for more years than she cares to count, and has collaborated with many of the great living composers, including Brian Ferneyhough, Chinary Ung, Roger Reynolds, Jeffrey Mumford, Frederick Rzewski, and Martin Bresnick. She has performed throughout the North America, Europe, and Asia including New York’s Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, Boston’s Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, the Walker Art Center, and the Aspen Music Festival in Colorado. Recent performances include residencies at the Chiheni Foundation, the University of Iowa Center for New Music, the National Flute Convention, the Sounds Modern series at the Ft. Worth Modern Museum, and the Nirmitta Composers Workshop in Bangkok, Thailand. Dr. Sadler is equally at home teaching advanced young artists and students brand-new to the piano. Her students have experienced great success in competitions at the local, regional, and national level. Her versatility as a performer extends to her work with students. Students grow in their artistry and skill in standard classical repertoire, explore a wide range of recent styles of classical music, and learn to collaborate with others as chamber musicians and accompanists. Dr. Sadler prepares students with the piano skills needed for any music career, whether it is music therapy, music education, performance, composition, or music technology. Dr. Sadler holds a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the University of California, San Diego specializing in the performance of the most adventurous, challenging, and experimental contemporary classical music. She earned a Bachelor of Music degree with highest distinction from the University of Kansas and a Master of Music with honors from New England Conservatory. Her teachers have included Aleck Karis, Stephen Drury, Sequiera Costa, Richard Angeletti, and Claude Frank. Awards include a Minnesota State Arts Council Individual Artist Grant, the American Composers Forum-Jerome Foundation Composer Commissioning Grant, and the Champions of New Music Award, awarded to Zeitgeist by the American Composers Forum. Her recordings are available on the Centaur, Tzadik, Innova, Mode, and Koch International Classics labels. Dr. Sadler joined the faculty of St. Cloud State University in 2015. Prior to that, she was on the faculty of Augsburg College and Bemidji State University. When not at the piano, she enjoys practicing and teaching yoga, cooking and traveling with her husband, Billy, and spending time with her two dogs, Oliver and Emma.

Soprano HILLARY JEAN YOUNG was born in Grand Forks, British Columbia. From the studio of Nancy Hermiston, Hillary received their Masters of Music in Opera from the University of British Columbia in May, 2014. Hillary has received several prestigious scholarships and awards, including the Roberto and Mary Wood Scholarship, the San Diego District Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions Encouragement Award, the LA Songfest New Music Fellowship, and second place in the La Jolla Symphony and Chorus Young Artists Competition.
