Composer/performer collective Ensemble Pamplemousse was founded in 2003 to provide a focal point for like-minded creators with a thirst for sonic exploration. The ensemble is a close-knit group of divergent artistic personalities, emergent from training in disparate musical fields. Their collective love for the exquisite in all sonic realms leads the ensemble to persistently discover new vistas of sound at the frayed edges of dissective instrumental performance technique. Compositions aggregate each member’s unique virtuosic talents into extraordinary magical moments. In the flexible moments of performance, the ensemble weaves together shapes of resonance, clusters of glitch, skitters of hyper action, and masses of absurdity into impeccable structures of unified beauty. David Broome produces musical worlds that investigate sound and the act of performing with humor and wide-eyed curiosity.

Natacha Diels combines ritual, improvisation, traditional instrumental technique, and cynical play to create worlds of curiosity and unease.

Andrew Greenwald engages with issues of pixelated sound material viewed at increasing resolutions; rational formal containers for that material; and didactic indexing of those containers to form a perceived whole/hole.

Bryan Jacobs uses electronic sounds to extend instruments into the super-human realm.

Jessie Marino explores the virtuosity of common activities, ritualistic absurdity, and bad technology.

Weston Olencki is primarily concerned with hyper-extended instrumental technique, intensive performer-composer collaboration, object-oriented performance strategies, feedback and noise, and alternative concepts of physicality within acoustic and electronic media.
